FOR THE BIRDS

Dear Pen-Pal,

My father is finally letting me use his typewriter to write to you. Next week I'm going to pester him to let me use his electric razor -- so I can shave the fuzz off peaches like they do on television. I HATE peach fuzz, don't you?

Anyway, what I want to tell you about is a kid who lives on our block. His name is Benjamin Bang, but hardly anybody calls him that. His Mother and Father call him "Benjamin" (sometimes his Father calls him "Listen, you!"), and our school-teacher calls him "Benja-MIN!"

But most of us call him THE BRAIN, because he's always thinking up bright ideas. (At least HE thinks they're bright ideas!)

The Brain is a nice little boy, everybody agrees, except that he has wheels in his head! The wheels are always turning, even when he's asleep -- although nothing much happens when he's sleeping, of course (although every once in a while The Brain does fall out of bed).

When he's awake, however, those busy wheels cook up some real crazy ideas -- which he calls BRAINSTORMS! And, as everybody knows about ANY kind of a storm, whenever a big Brainstorm hits it's time for all sensible people to take cover!

For example, one day our friend, little Dinky Dinklehoff, walked into The Brain's backyard and found him tying pieces of string to the corners of three handkerchiefs.

"What are you doing, Brain?" Dinky asked.

"Some little birds just hatched in the nest up in that tree," answered The Brain. "And you know how little birds are always falling out of their nests? Well, so these new baby birds won't get hurt, I'm making parachutes for the three of them."

Dinky thought about this awhile, then he spoke up again.

"The real trouble when little birds fall out of their nests is that they can't fly UP again," he pointed out.

"I thought of that," The Brain replied. "So, as soon as I finish the parachutes, I'm going to build a long ladder out of toothpicks -- so the little birds can walk back up to their nest."

"Oh." Dinky said. "Well, come to think of it, Brain, the real danger to birds isn't falling out of a tree -- it's CATS! They're the ones who make the trouble for the birds. Cats."

The Brain held up a little parachute and looked at it with pleasure and pride.

"I thought of that long ago," he told Dinky. "That's why I had my Father plant this particular kind of tree here -- to keep cats away."

"What?" asked Dinky. "The TREE -- keep cats away? How can it do that?"

"Easy," answered The Brain. "It scares them, that's how. Y'see, it's a DOGWOOD tree!"

"That's silly, Brain!" Dinky cried. "It's still only a tree -- not a DOG!"

"It has a BARK, hasn't it?" asked The Brain. "Besides, I know it scares cats. You see that stump of a plant over there? Well, this tree was no sooner planted in the yard than that old shrub over there died of fright!"

"Died of fright?" exclaimed Dinky. "What do you mean? Plants don't die of fright -- even if you plant a DOGWOOD tree near them!"

"That plant did, Dinky," The Brain insisted. "It was a PUSSYWILLOW!"

"Goodbye, Brain!" Dinky said -- and went home.

Well, pal, that will give you an idea of what The Brain is like! Write to me soon.
